

Parent-school relations before and after school reform in 1997

Banasiak, Malgorzata. Nicolaus Copernicus University in Toruń, Poland

In my paper I would like to show how parent-school relations changed after school reform. I will say a little bit about how these relations looked like during communism and how it started to look in democratic times. A lot of things changed. Since 1990 school started to see parents more like partners. After school reform in 1997 almost everything changed in Polish education. It also helped to systematize parents' role in the new school. In my paper I will show two different school worlds, before and after reform. School against parents and school for parents!